

Please, tell us something about you.

Name and surname: Paul Woolliscroft

Where are you from? : Newcastle, England

Name of your University: Slovak University of Technology, Faculty of Material Science and Technology

Year of attendance: 2012/2013 - 2014/2015

What major are you in? : PhD - Industrial Management

What is your hobby? :

Since coming to Slovakia I enjoy making the most of the country's excellent location in central Europe and taking the opportunity to explore and learn more about Slovakia's rich cultural heritage and also that of the many diverse neighbouring countries in the region.

What do you like about Slovak people? ☺:

I have found that all the Slovak people I have met are all incredibly warm and friendly, very willing to help and are appreciative to newcomers wishing to learn more about the country. As a result the experience arriving at the university was facilitated with ease by the help of many helpful staff within the faculty.

Do you like Slovakia and what do you like the most about Slovakia? :

As I mentioned above I think the Slovak people are one of the best aspects of the country, but I also love the traditional Slovak food, the beautiful countryside, castle's and spa towns.

Tell us something more about you (whatever you want) ☺:

Before enrolling on the PhD programme at the MTF, I completed a Bachelor's Degree in Business Studies and a Master's Degree in Marketing at Staffordshire University, England. After completing an exchange at MTF last year I was impressed by the support offered by the faculty and subsequently decided to pursue a PhD which I hope will allow me to develop my knowledge further in an international context.
